

FOR FAMILIES WITH MONEY IN THE ACCOUNT

596 THERAPY PROVIDERS. ONE RULE THAT TRIPS FAMILIES.

Speech, occupational therapy, dyslexia intervention, ADHD and executive-function support, behavioral therapy: 600 providers are on the state's list, and 124 of them work with families online, anywhere in Texas. The rule that catches people is about other benefits.

THE RULE

The account pays only for therapy fees "not covered by any federal, state, or local government benefits, such as Medicaid or CHIP, or by any private insurance that the child is enrolled in." That's Odyssey's wording of the rule. If Medicaid, CHIP, or your own insurance covers a therapy, TEFA can't pay for the same thing. Odyssey names behavioral, occupational, speech, and physical therapy as common eligible types. Ask the provider, in writing, whether the service is billable to any coverage you have, and keep the answer.

WHO'S ON THE LIST, BY SPECIALTY

Specialty	Providers
Speech	257
Behavioral	165
Occupational	143
Dyslexia/Dsygraphia	130
Autism Support	111
ADHD/Executive Function	94
Physical	60
Other Therapy	14
Music	9
Vision	2

A provider can carry several tags, so the column sums above 600.

FOUR QUESTIONS BEFORE YOU BOOK

- Are you on the state's TEFA vendor list under this exact name? (Check finder.educationfreedom.texas.gov yourself too.)
- Is this specific service approved, or only some of what you offer?
- Is any of this billable to a benefit we have?
- Do you work online, and does that change the rate?

If your child has an IEP on file

The state says students with an IEP may receive a larger award, up to $30,000, based on the district and the setting code on the IEP. If you were awarded in Tier 1 without the add-on and you had a qualifying IEP from 2023-24, 2024-25, or 2025-26, the state's Families page describes how they matched IEPs and what to do if yours was missed.
